Q1: What is Journalism?

To me, journalism is a responsibility and an art of sharing true stories that count. It's about finding out the truth, asking difficult questions, and telling people what is going on around them. A journalist speaks less than they listen — they hear various sides, fact-check, and share what they have in a way that is honest, simple, and unbiased. Journalism can bring out injustice, commemorate human success, and bring awareness to vital matters. In an information-cluttered world, journalism is the key to enabling people to distinguish fact from noise. Through articles, videos, or interviews, quality journalism brings people in touch with the world and with one another in a very impactful manner.
